RTC Launches New Community Web Portal

Randolph Telephone has launched a new community web portal for your area. This community web portal provides easy access to news, weather, sports, finance, entertainment and health information, along with local TV listings. More importantly for non-profits, it's also a one-stop shop for local information about events and organizations in your communities. Best of all, the portal is free for all non-profit groups, is extremely user-friendly, and gets the content out to the entire community. Even if you already have a website, this portal will help you reach a much larger audience with your posts and news releases. You simply submit the information and it's posted under the "local" link on the main page. It's that easy! Jeni Andrews with RTC stated, "We would love your participation to help the community build and grow." To get started posting your local content today or to learn more, contact Al Minerio with RTC. He will set you up and train you on how to post your content. The training will take less than 10 minutes. Randolph Telephone is proud to provide this free community portal and hope to you will take advantage of the opportunity to promote the good work of your non-profit today...Take a look: <http://www.asheboronc.com/>

NC Cooperative Extension Holds 2009 Forestry Field Day

NC Cooperative Extension invites the public to a Forestry Field Day on April 4. Participants will meet at McDowell Lumber (2473 Falling Oak Road--off Old NC Hwy 49--Asheboro) at 9:00 a.m. and then travel to the property of J.B. Davis to observe and discuss woodland management. NC State University Extension Forestry and Wood Products faculty and staff, along with consulting forester David Henderson, will conduct the program. Topics to be addressed include lumber and log grading, regeneration harvesting, crop tree release, woody biomass harvesting, soil productivity, wildlife and forestry, and the present use value taxation program. Lunch will be served, and the program will end at approximately 1:00 p.m. Sponsors of the event include NC Cooperative Extension, Henderson and Tugwell Consulting Foresters, Edwards and Randolph Forestry Management Group, J.B. Davis, McDowell Lumber Company, and Piedmont Forestry Consultants. Please call 336-318-6000 to pre-register no later than March 27. Call early to ensure a spot on the list. For accommodations for persons with disabilities, contact Mary Helen Ferguson at 336-318-6000 no later than five business days before the event.
